The effulgent glory of Romanticism had peaked by the Mid-Nineteenth Century. Its heir, Late Romanticism, swept forward to Brahms, Tchaikowsky, Wagner, Mahler et al, while new movements such as Symbolism & Impressionism eddied on the periphery of public & critical opinion. Enormous international expositions on two continents excited interest in technological advances & in foreign cultures. Musical life in the great cities broadened into new genres affecting composers, their marketplace & consumers. The seeds of modernism were sown as the lavish era teetered on the brink of extinction with the Great War and Russian Revolution to come. Everything was changing – musical harmony, form & style, esthetic theory, societal norms, ideas of education.

This series aims to "paint" for you a view of THE GILDED ERA using audio, video & live performances in the company of commentary drawn from the personalities of the day & now as well as colorful images of artworks, architecture, theatrical design, & clothing.

Familiar faces will appear along with new faces you will want to see & famous musical works along with wonderful pieces you may never have heard – for your enrichment.
